When John Wentworth came into office in March, 1857, he told the people that he wanted tration. The request was granted; and when ne went out of office at the end of his term he told them the floating debt was all paid off. At a Ward meeting a few evenings ago, be repeated that he transmitted no floating debt to his successor. The records of the city gov-ernment prove not only that he did not pay off the floating debt, but that he left it larger than the Council levied a tax for 1857 of fifteen mills for general purposes and two mills tor warrant for that year amounted to $572. 225.37. If he had fulfilled his promise, out of this sum he would have paid off the floating debt which came down to his Administratio of $170,235.37, and met the current expense of the city. Instead of paying off that debt. however, or any portion of it, he increased it to $208 946 8. That was the extent of his retrenchment and economy. The books of the Comptroller, and the Comptroller himself, will verify this statement. But with characteristic effrontery, in his paper and in public speeches. just at the time Wentworth was going out of office, he asserted again and again He gave the same assurance to his successor in office; but no sooner had the latter entered upon his duties than he found there was paper past due and awaiting payment as moows: to Geo. F. Lee, for bonds due since the previous bonds due since March 1st, $66,234.84; to the werage Commissioners, for balances o liability to the county for the enlargement and uncompleted contracts thrown over upor the incoming administration. The financia report of February 1859, shows a debt hande 030.63; but there must be added $41,916.17 for interest to Sowerage Commissioners, Reform School, amount refuoded on assessment of the shining lights of modern Democracy. His speech at the so-called Union Meeting in took the ground that slavery is the normal con dency. The orator, in the Lemmon case, now perfore the New York Court of Appeals, takes another step forward and commends himself anew to the confidence of the Democracy, by lish Slavery in the Free States:

Lord Mansfield said in Somersett's case, "The state Slavery is of such a nature that it is incapable of being introduced on any rosson, moral or political, but only by positive law," and negro philim has been in raptures with him ever since. Nevertheless it was a bald inconsequential truism.

Blackstone, repeating the idle speech of others upon the subject, tells us that the loss of nare is binding all over the globe; not that so human laws are of any validity if contrary to it.

The law of nature is in every judicial sense, a mere figure of apeech. In a state of nature, if the existence of human beings in such a state may be supposed, there is no law. The prudential resolves of an individual for his own government, do not come under the denomination of law.

The judicial department has no right to declare negree slavery to be contrary to the law of nature, or immoral, or unjust, or to take any measures or introduce any policy for its suppression founded on any such ideas.

The piurality rule may be considered as abandoued by the Republicans for the present. They straggled hard is rit for half a mostly, but found that without a presiding officer to pit questions, it was unpossible even to get a vote on it. The pledged band of fifty fire enters will never allow it to pass, as its adoption would be equivalent to the election of Sharman—this they concede.

Weodson, of Missouri, gave notice that he would offer on Friday (to morrow), "or as soon thereafter as possible, a resolution providing that after the next ballot, in case of a failure to elect, the House will proceed to vote again for Speaker, dropping from the list of candidates the person or persons having the lowest number of votes, and so on, reducing the number of candidates at each successive vote, until a Speaker is elected."

being regarded by them as an evil; destined to be of only temporary duration.

At the present day the doctrines taught by the Fathers were a bar to all political promotion, and that every department of the government was in subjection to the slave-breeding interest. Such was the intolerance that even the sacred rights of private opinion and free speech were interdicted in nearly half the States of the Union; that a despotism more oppressive than Russian, a censorship more deadly than the Romish Inquisition, existed in the slave States. The days of the Reign of Terror in France were not more repressive of the opinions of men than the lynch law despotism of the slave States. [Sensalion.]

Connecticut.

We find in the Springfield, Mass., Republicar, the following in regard to the Presidential preferences of the delegates recently elected from Connecticut to the Republican National Connecticut.

Connecticut to the Republican Nations Convention:

The majority of these delegates probably represent the present tendencies of the Republicans of Connecticut to the nomination of Edward Bates. Of the delegates at large, Foster and Holley are for him; the other two, Welles and Cleveland, old Democrats, will demand a more pronounced Republican, and their personal choice is probably Gov. Chase. The delegates for the last and 2d districts are inclined to Bates; those of the 3d are divided, one for Bates, one against; and those of the 4th are supposed to prefer a more decided candidate. Dinion is not, however, firmly formed for or against any candidate unless it be against Gov. Seward. He seems to have little or no strength among the Republicans of Connecticut. Their position and necessities as a party appear to them to demand a more conservative nomination. The delegation will probably be divided in their crisinal voices at Chicago, and are not among the reputations of conservative in them to demand a more conservative nomination. The delegation will probably be divided in their original rotes at Chicago, and are not likely to be a together united at any time unless it should be upon Gov. Banks, who has the respect and confidence of the various elements represented in the delegation. In the ballois of relegates, Welles and Foster were chosen by the second balloit and against Sidney Dean, exmember of Congress; and Holley by three majority over the argregate attength of several opposents. The delegation is a just and able representation of the party, and they are in a position to set, as they are disposed to set, for the leat interests of the Republicans of the whole country, first being true to their own constitu

Our village has recently been the theatre of somewhat extraordinary evants. On Monday night last, about ten o'clock, a fire was discovered in the most beautiful and aubstantial brick block in the place. The structure had been built only the last assaon, and occupied but a few months. Three large stores engrossed the lower story, and two law offices, two printing offices, and two dentists offices the upper story. Considerable property was removed from the In the Kendall County Circuit Court recently Peter Schoonover, living in the town of Vermi-ion, in this county, was tried for malicions pros-ceution of a family named Meyers, neighbors to him, was found guilty by the jury, and fined the heavy sum of $5,000.

The circumstances of the case elicited at the heavy sum of $5,000.

The direction of the case elicited at the trial, are as follows: Schoonover had a boy, about 15 years old, living with him, whom he often treated with great cruelty. In the summer of '58 he whipped the boy so cruelly that he loft his house and went to live with Mr. Harman Meyers near by. Shortly afterward, while the boy in company with two or three others, was bathing in a pond, Schoonover crept along to the pond, and so ring the boy, dragged him back to his house, and there shut him up in a dark room and nearly starced him. He finally told him nuless he would consent to swear that of foul play immediately took possession of many minds, the result of which is, that on yesterday atternous the wife of G. W. Andrews, Esq., and Mr. Andrews himself, the editor and reputed proprietor of the Scereign, were put under arrest, and the former taken immediately to Janesville, where she had resided up to within a few days, and the latter, in default of $2,000 required bait, was taken to jail at Ekhorn, to await an examination on Monday next. Mrs. Andrews is secused, we learn, of attempting to fire a house she occupied in Janesville, three several times within a few weeks, the motive being to obtain the insurance, and the proof against her is said to be positive. Whether Mr. Andrews is guilty, it is impossible now to conjecture; but the excitement against him is quite general and intense. We cannot but feel for him and his family, and hops he may clear himself from suspiction.

On last evening the citizens held a meeting, in which both parties participated, for the purpose of adopting measures to re estadish the North-row, the publishers of which had lost all their interest in the office by the fire, the senior partner losing near $1500. A committee was appointed and a subscription commenced on the spot. It is a bard case, and it is bloped that, with what may be done in Delavan and adjoining towns, and accommodation abroad, this beautiful and enterprising village may not be without a paper.

It is worthy of note that the Democrats who as S. required. The Meyers family were received on warrants by a Justice of the Peace, and on the boy's testimony, bound to appear at the next term of the Lassile County Circuit Court. But before this, the boy told the neighbors that he had sworn falsely on compulsion, and on their promise of protection he told the whole story of his persecution, and agreed to tell the truth thereafter. The consequence of this was that no bill was found against the Meyers family. It was now Meyer's turn to seek redress through the courte. He suck Schoonover for mulicious prosecution, in the Circuit Court, from which the latter took a change of vanue to Kendall County, and the case was tried. here a few days since, resulting in the verdicts above stated. But Jack didn't care for what they said: b But Jack didn't care for what they said; he climbed the steep hill-side towards where the noise came, and when he reached the place, what do you think he saw? Why, an axe that, stood there hacking and hewing, all of itself, at the trunk of a fir.

"Good day!" said Jack. "So you stand here all alone and hew, do you?"

"Yes; here I've stood and hewel and hacked a long, long time, waiting for, you," said the Axe.

the Aze.

"Well, here I am at last," said Jack, as he took the axe, pulled it off its haft, and stuffed both head and haft into his wallet.

So when he got down ag in to his brothers, they began to jeer and laugh at him.
"And now, what funny thing was it you saw up yonder on the hill-side?" they said.

"Oh, it was only an axe we heard," said Jack. Jack.
So when they had gone a bit farther, they came under a steep spur of rock, and up there they heard something digging and shoveling.
"I wonder now," said Jack, "what it is digging and shoveling up yonder at the top of the rock."

rock."
"An, you're always so clever with your wonderings," said Peter and Faul again, "as if you'd never heard a wood-pecker hacking and pecking at a hollow tree."
"Well, well," said Jack, "I think it would be a piece of fun just to see what it really is."
And so off he set to climb the rock, while the others laughed and made game of him.
But he didn't care a bit for that; up he clomb,
and when he cot near the ton, what do you think he saw? Why, a spade that stood there digging and delving.

"Good day!" said Jack. "So you stand ners all alone, and dig and delve."

"Yes, that's what I do," said the Spade, "and that's what I've done this many a long day, waiting for you."

"Well, here I am," said Jack again, as he took the spade and knocked it off its handle, and put it into his wallet, and then down again to his brothers. Space that what we heard."

So they went on again a good bit, till they came to a brook. They were thirsty all three came to a brook. They were thirsty all that the water mights' run out. Then he put the walnut in his wallet, and ran down to his brothers.

"Well, now," said Peter and Paul, "have you found out where the water comes from? A rare sight it must have been!"

"Oh, after sil, it was only a hole it ran out of," said Jack; and so the others laughed and made game of him again, but Jack did'nt mind that a bit.

"After, I had the fun of seeing it," said he. So when they had gone a bit farther, they came to the king's palace; but as every one in the kingdom had heard how they might win the Princess and half the realm, if they could only fell the big oak and dig the king's well, so many had come to try their luck that the oak was now twice as stout and big as it had been at first, for two chips grew for every one they heard out with their axes, as I dare say you all bear in mind. So the king had now laid it down as a punishment, that if any one tried and couldn't fell the oak, he should be put on a barren island, and both his cars were to be elipped off. But the two brothers didn't let themselves be seared by that; they were quite sure they could fell the oak, and Peter, as he was the oldest, was to try his hand first; but it went with him as with all the rest who had hown at the oak; for every ch.p. he cut out, two grow in its place. So the king's men seized him, and chipped off both his ears, and put him out on the island.

Now Paul, he was to try his luck, but he fared just the same; when he had hewn two or three strokes, they began to see the oak grow, and so the king's men seized him, too, and clipped his ears, and put him out on the island: and his ears they clipped, cleasn, because they said he ought to have taken a lesson from his brother.

So now Jack was to try.

son from his order.

So now Jack was to try.

"If you will look like a marked sheep, we're quite ready to clip your ears at once, and then you'll save yourself some bother," said the king, for he was angry with him for his brothore sake. "Well, I'd like just to try first," said Jack, and so he got leave. Then he took his axe out of his wallet and fitted it to his heft.

"Hew away!" said he to his axe; and away it hewed, making the chips fly again, so that it wasn't long before down came the oak.

When that was done Jack pulled out his spade and fitted it to its handle.

"Dig away!" said he to the spade; and so the spade began so dig and delive till the earth and rock flew out in splinters, and so he had the well soon dug out, you may think.

And when he got it as big and deep as he

A MYSTARIOUS STRANGES.—On Thursday morning, about & o'clock, while it was snowing great guns, Mr. I. V. Waterman, one of our city bankers, received a special deposit at his residence, which was outside the usual rules of banking. Answering the call of the door-bell at the hour above stated, he went to the door-and there to his utter amazement he found on the door-sill, wrapped up in a sheet, a female infant, apparently about two weeks old, accompanying which was a note reading thus. "Take care of this described bill, and (ight will bless care of this described bill, and (ight will bless). and the sparently about two weeks and the sparently about two weeks and the sparently about two weeks and the sparently and too will bless you, for when you receive it, its parents will be far away. Fall rhon A Bhibur.—A man named Neagle fell from the Fox River Rain oad bridge on Wednesday, a distance of 25 or 30 feet, breaking both his arms, and dangerously bruising his head and body. He is brother to the contracter for the work on the new bridge, and when the accident occurred he was removing some part of the old frame work. Dr. Maybery set the broken bones of his arms, and dressed his other woulds, making him as comfortable as could be done, considering the dangerous nature of Cursosity.—The Lincoln Herald says:—Mr. B.

F. Manly has left at our office a piece of wood, bearing the mark of an axe or some othersharp instrument found while digging a well near the Christian Church, in this place, seventeen feet beneath the surface of the earth. The wood is somewhat decayed.

—We are credibly informed that the notes of the La Crosse and La Crescent Hank are to be retired, and the same capital employed in a bank here. Mr. Wells' character as a successful banker and financier is a good guarantee that the bank will be a good institution, under Wiscomiu laws, and where our business men can get accommodation. A DARING SCOUNDERS, House Thirey, SEDUCER, dc.—The Prairie du Chien Courier says that a young man recently stole a horse from C. Lyman, in Crawford Co., that the last heard of him was in Lefayette, lows, and adds of him:

We believe from the description given of the their in this case, he is the rame individual who has been passing his time for some months past in Southern Iowa and Wisconsin, seducing girls, false marriages and horse stealing. He has seduced, and in four instances married, no less than seven girls, stole and ran off with three livery teams, one horse and buggy, and five single horses, all within two months. We have been tracing him by the reports of these acts, and now believe he is figuring somewhere in Southern Minnesota.

This currency will, however, be bought at from one half to one per cent. The Grands adds: "We understand that Illinois money has not been received on deposit at Milwaukee and Madison for several months, and this course is taken because it is not readily convertible, while Wiscomsin money is sent home for redemption from Illinois in large quantities. The banks here have taken the course purely in self-defence. "M Berrat Ourrace.—On Tuesday evening, the 10th inst., an Irishman named David Flain, entered the grog shop of Daniel Lynch, on the lower patch to get whisky. It seems that the nower patch to get whisky. It seems that the man was somewhat intoxicated, and in seme way excited the anger- of the Lynch family.—He was set upon by Mr. and Mrs. Lynch and their son Jerry, who after beating him until he fainted, kieked him out of the shanty, breakh and their son Jerry, who after beating him until he fainted, kieked him out of the shanty, breakh and their son Jerry, who after beating him until he fainted, kieked him out of the shanty, breakh and their son Jerry, who after beating him until he fainted, kieked him out of the shanty, breakh and their son derry who after beating him until he fainted, kieked him out of the shanty, breakh and their son forces Wright and Smith, and are now swanting in the county jail, their examination, which takes place next Friday. They are old offenders. Mrs. Lynch has been sent to Janesville before.—Baloit dournal.

the Rev. Father Hackett of Tarrytown.

The report circulated in the religious amsecular press, a few weeks age, that the Hog Edward Stanly of California, formerly in Congress from North Carolina, designed taking holy orders in the Epiacopal Churcn, is withou foundation. Mr. S. contemplates nothing of the kind. He has recently returned to California to devote himself to professional and agricultural parentia, on his fine ranche, some thirty miles from San Francisco.
